UltraAspire®

INSPIRED BY ATHLETES

It was on the Idaho side of the Tetons that a young man found his love for the outdoors. Bryce Thatcher knew early on that he wanted to build a life immersed in the trails and mountains. Bryce would charge through the Tetons with his lifeline (his backpack) and would run with the straps in hand to keep it securely against his back and pushed as long and as hard as possible until he felt like he was going to collapse, at which point he would stop to drink. He would guzzle an entire bottle of water or apple juice which would slosh in his stomach and ultimately slow him down. For someone who deeply enjoyed moving quickly through the mountains, this was counter-intuitive. From this, an idea was born, what if he could access his fluids without ever taking the backpack off? What if there was a way to comfortably carry equipment without chafing or having the backpack bounce all over. These would be the thoughts that revolutionized the efficiency and performance of endurance athletes to this present day.

The human body shape is complex with intricate detail and function. The same attention to detail is present in the design of our packs to enable precise movement, contact, and weight distribution which ensures that there is never any inhibition to the biomechanics of the human body.

THE PERFECT FIT STARTS WITH THE DESIGN

THE ERGOFIT DIFFERENCE

SHOULDER STRAPS

Human shoulders aren't straight, so a pack's shoulder straps shouldn't be either. Longer straps allow the back portion to sit deeper on the neck to prevent any rubbing. This addition in length helps to create slope as the straps come over the top of the shoulders and around the neck following the natural curve of the body. The harness then follows an S curve around the arms and chest area to avoid any hindrance to the running motion.

WEIGHT DISTRIBUTION

The harness construction also helps to keep the pack balanced at any capacity to ensure the same high quality fit empty or fully loaded. In regards to balance, the load is positioned lower on the back closer to the body's center of gravity, the hips. This placement helps to stop unnecessary energy expenditure during the long haul.

Small Footprint

Anatomically engineered, the pack covers only what is necessary on the body to keep it secure thus allowing for your temperature to remain cooler during heavy energy exertion.

UltraCool Light Mesh

This flex mono mesh remains very lightweight during long and hot endeavors. Breathable yet durable, this mesh's build quality adds resilience to your pack without compromising weight.

MAX02 System

The Max02™ System is a shock cord securing system that helps create a comfortable & natural breathing pattern while at the same time keeping the pack secure. The shock cord allows for stretch outward and 100% rebound which keeps the pack snug against your body empty or fully loaded with no restriction of movement.

ERGOFIT

— waist —

Our waist packs have seen unprecedented amounts of attention from start to finish. A waist pack enhances performance with heat regulation, conserves energy due to load placement, and is designed to sit so stable it goes unnoticed on the body.

1

BREATHABLE WEBBING

An UltraAspire exclusive, the breathable webbing helps to keep your body cooler through dissipation and will not pick up any moisture weight as you sweat. Thin breathable mesh in the middle provides circulation while engineered Kevlar lines the edges for durability and absolutely no buckle slippage.

2

WEIGHT DISTRIBUTION

A major benefit of a waist pack is load location. The load is positioned on the body's center of gravity, the hips. This placement helps to stop unnecessary energy expenditure during the long haul. Balance comes from proper weight distribution in the front and back of the belt which allows for a looser and more natural sitting fit.

3

QUICK ADJUST

Your gear should work for you, not against you. The buckle is placed on the front for quick fastening without adjusting the pack. Adjustment straps that pull forward allow for any changes to be made on the go in a natural motion.

4

EFFORTLESS ACCESS

Accessibility to any and all essentials without missing a stride is crucial. Bottle placement is intuitive and can be easily accessed or holstered with one hand. All contents can be removed and refilled without ever taking the pack off making your aid station stops a breeze.

Visible Shadows

"Having just recently tried the waist lights from UltraAspire, it's fair to say, running at night with one of these is like running during the day. They are awesome. No more bounce, they cast shadows because of the position, and the battery is strong all night... just sayin."

- UltraAspire Elite Karl "The Speedgoat" Meltzer, the winningest 100 miler on the planet
